

Resources for Cultural Organizations Impacted by Hurricane Ida

The Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities recognizes that many of our cultural partners experienced significant damage to facilities and collections during and following Hurricane Ida. The below list of resources is not exhaustive but may prove helpful to organizations seeking guidance and support in their recovery efforts.

National Heritage Responders

Impacted cultural institutions can call the NHR hotline for advice on disaster recovery, impact assessments, collections care and salvage, and more. The hotline is 202-661-8068.

Federal Emergency Management Agency

If your cultural organization needs assistance or advice in navigating FEMA support following a disaster, reach out to FEMA Emergency Management Specialist Lori Foley. Foley specializes in cultural heritage collections and can be reached at lori.foley@fema.dhs.gov.

New Orleans Preservation Coalition and Alliance for Response

NOPC is part of the national Alliance for Response network and can provide helpful on-the-ground recovery support to cultural organizations in the greater New Orleans area. They can be reached at nolapreservationcoalition@gmail.com.

Emergency CAP \(Collections Assessment for Preservation\)

Emergency CAP funding is available for museums whose collections have been affected by recent disasters. More details on the CAP program are available here.

National Disaster Recovery Fund for Archives

The Society of American Archivists Foundation offers grants of up to $5,000 to archival repositories in disaster recovery mode. Learn more about the grants and access the application here.
